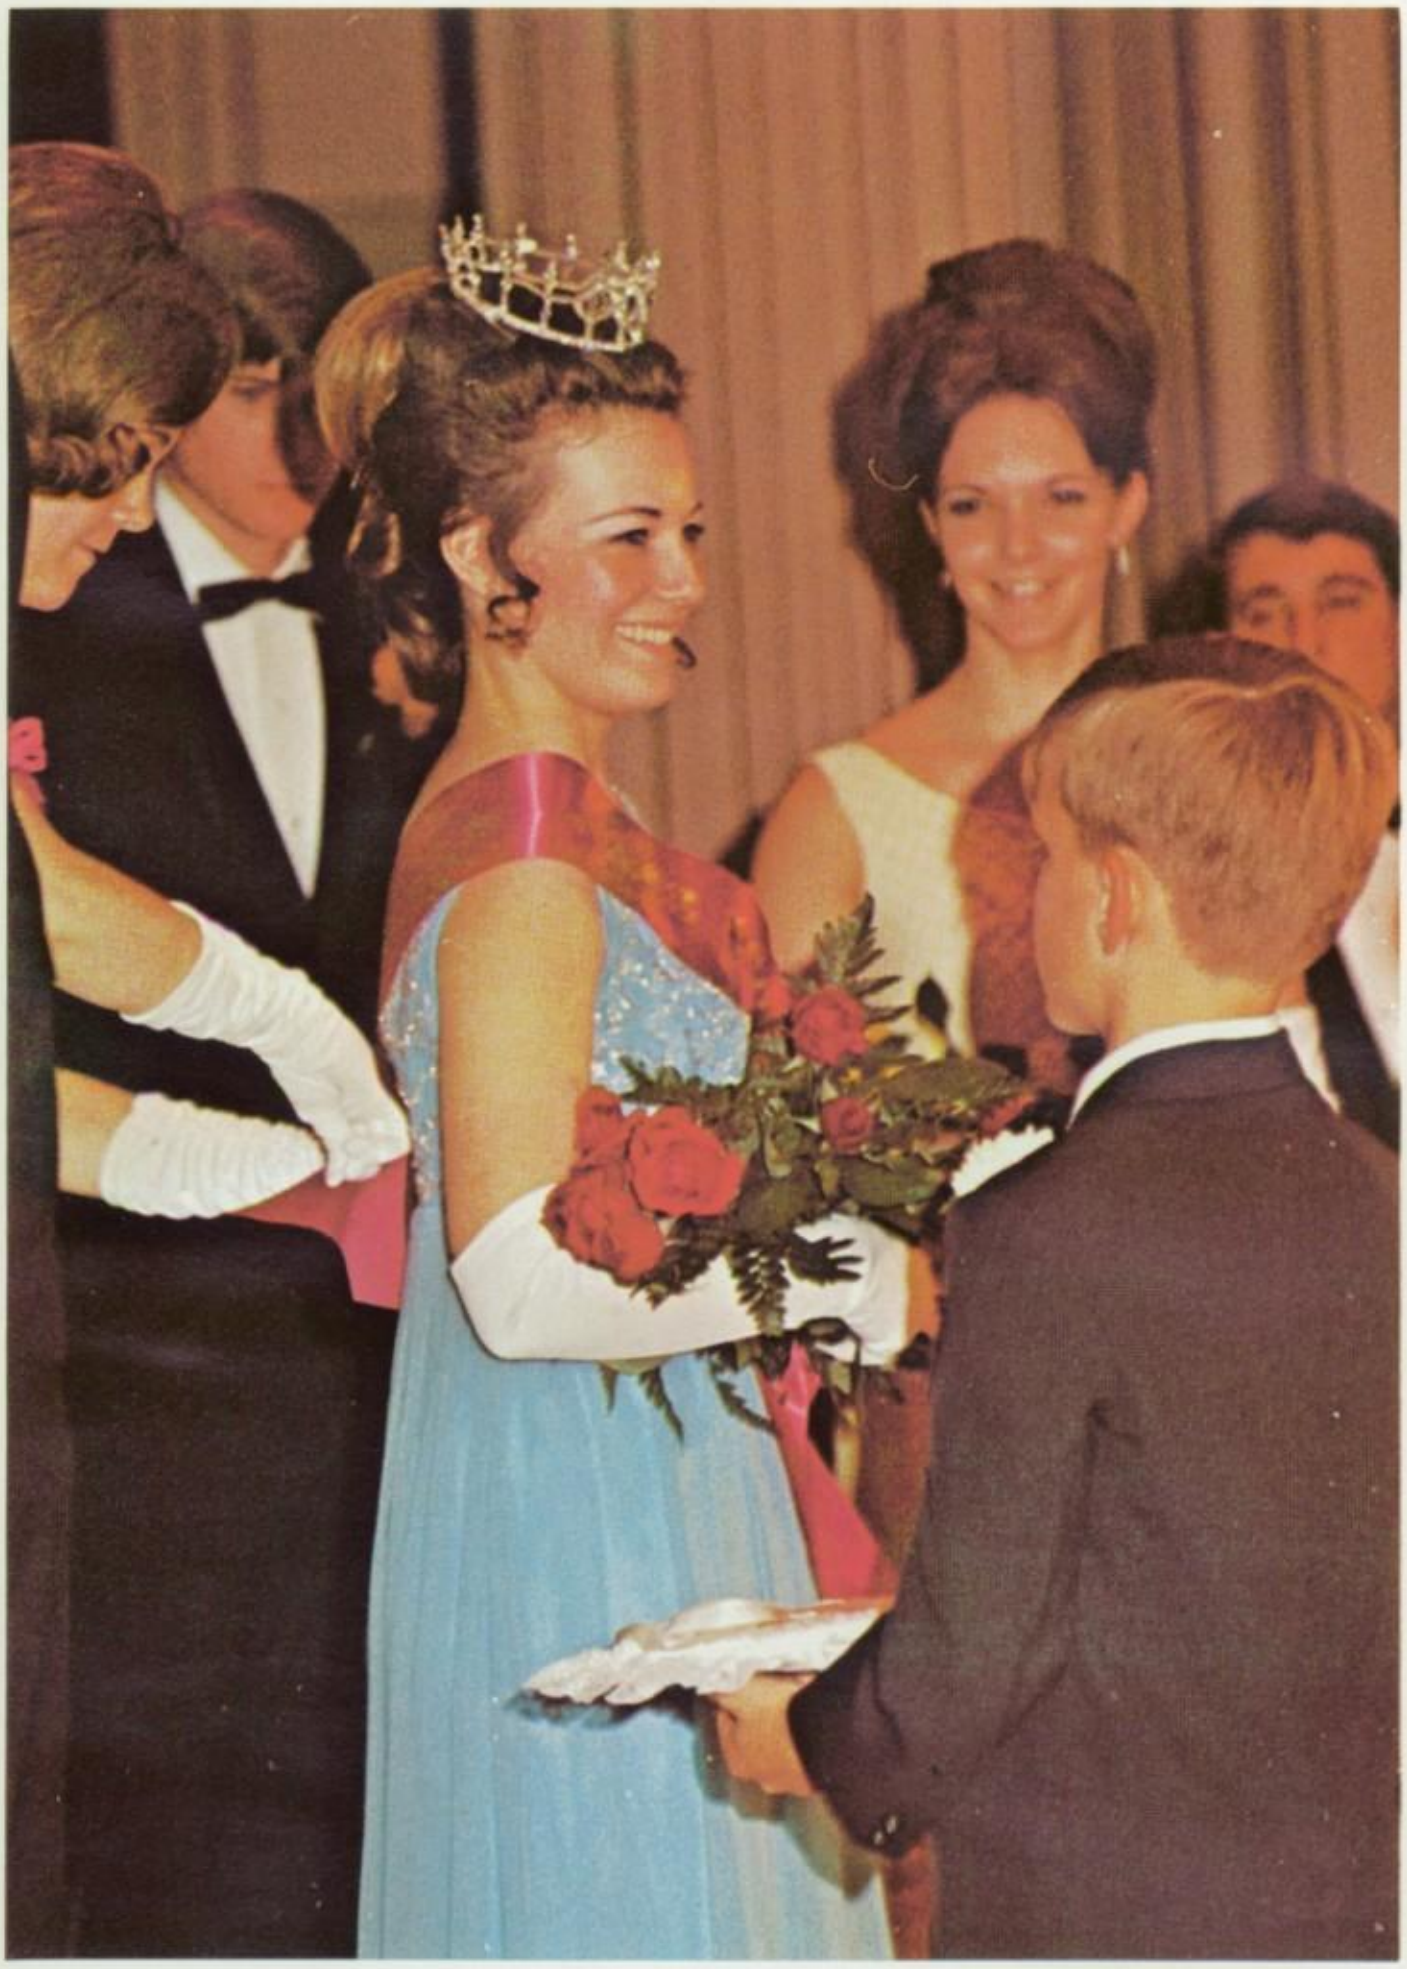
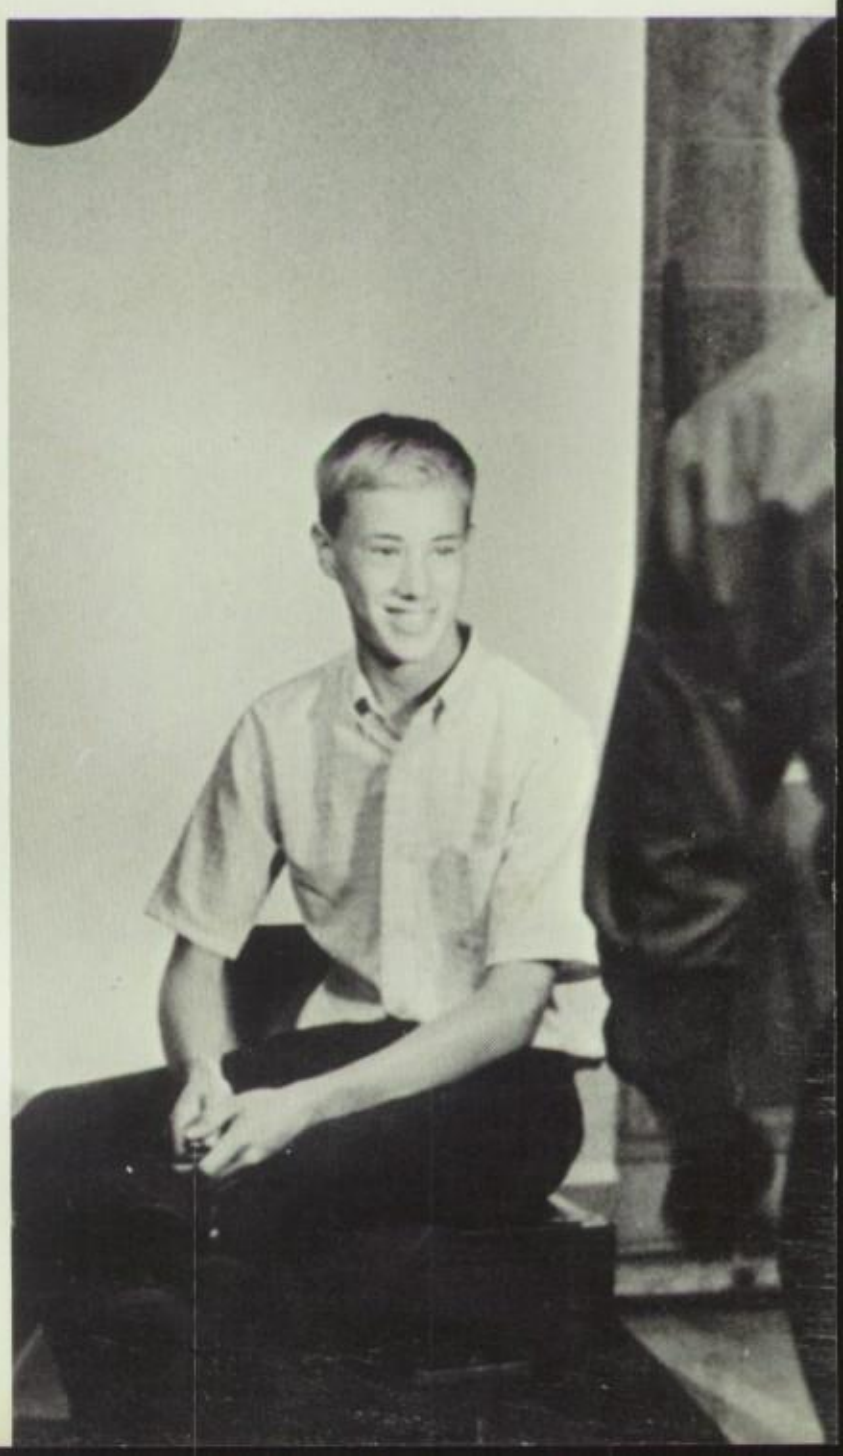
GIVE YOUR SUPPORT





Our day is only starting and a lot of territory lies ahead. Come as you are; the "original" Pathfinder leads the way. We could travel quickly by plane, or by car, or by train. But we're searching for something more than sights. We hunt for good friends and good times. So we walk and live and in living find life—funny and sad—in pathways. And, finding true meaning in these pathways is to make the journey together . . .

Administration blazed a trail in Riverside education

Mr. Kenneth H. Yonkee, Superintendent of Schools

The Pathfinders first encounter is a well-worn trail leading to the administration. Many students travel this way, some with questions, some with fear and worry. This road branches into three smaller but very important trails. Walking down the first trail, the traveler discovers a new, and friendly face, that of Mr. Kenneth Yonkee, Superintendant of Schools. The two remaining paths lead to Mr. C. John Brannon, Principal, and Mr. Edward Phillips, Assistant Principal. Those men organize the small trails into the main path known as Riverside.

The sign says "Guidance"-this seems the best place to obtain information for the journey. Two other travelers enter with the Pathfinder, one small and timid, the other older and more confident. All are met by the friendly face of Mrs. Ferringer. The apprehensive student follows directions to Mr. Meehan, who will help him shape his future at Riverside. Without instruction, the older student goes immediately to Mr. Cornell to recieve news of college placement or job opportunities. All three leave confidently assured that their journey will be pleasent and successful.

Guidance directed the courses of students

Ingenuity plus curiosity equaled mathematical comprehension

The traveler now spies all sorts of mathematical symbols—exponents, integers, square-roots and funny figures with arrows pointing in different directions. He has entered a path that has him confused. However, with the help of all the different math subjects, it should be easy to find the right direction. He realizes students work diligently along this trail because mathematics can be applied to every walk of life, even to the traveling of a simple pathfinder.

Music buoyed student spirit

Weary from his travels, the wayfarer rests on a near-by bench. Suddenly from a distance, the blaring of trumpets, shreiking of clarinets and beating of drums fill the air with the excitement of a parade. His attention is drawn to the highstepping band in green and white. Refreshed by the music as it passes, he travels onward. Lost in thought, the Pathfinder is distracted by the melodious sounds of a choir, which he recognizes as one of the talented singing groups of Riverside. Walking toward the sound, he discovers that it is a rehersal for one of the concerts preformed by the Choral Department. Reviewed by this musical interlude, our happy traveler continues on his way down the path to more thrilling adventures.

"Get on top of that note!" Mr. Phillips instructs the ninth grade choir in vocal techniques.

Beep! Honk! Honk! The Pathfinder becomes an irate pedestrian nearly mowed down by the Driver Education car. As the white car whizzes past, he notices a terrified student clinging to the wheel. A bystander assures him that by the end of six hours of driving in traffic, this frightened student will have the experience needed to drive with ease and care. After leaving the near-calamity, the wanderer is startled by the sound of shattering glass and crushing metal. Walking toward the ghastly noises, he discovers a group of students, most of them looking quite ill, watching a bloody but informative movie about the results of careless driving. As he turns to roam once more, he realizes that with all this instruction, Riverside should have the best drivers on the road.

Home Ec students encountered stirring situations

Tantalizing aromas issue from the Home Economics Department as the traveler ambles past. He notices Home Ec students preparing appetizing dinners while others discuss the fashions of today. Around him, the girls of Riverside learn the fundamentals of sewing, cooking, home management, designing and child care. After viewing a fashion show and sampling some cookies, the rested and refreshed wanderer takes up his path again.

A whirl of color blinds the Pathfinder and before he can find his bearings, he realizes he is being posed for a portrait. A young artist chats amiably as he mixes his paints. Around him, junior-high students scramble for materials for huge Christmas wreaths. Another group intently studies the color wheel and the variations of tints and hues. Away from the din and laughter, senior-high students sketch, draw, and paint as they demonstrate their abilities gained by many years of training. Glancing about the room, he sees works of art which exhibit beauty, others which are "attention-getters" and many hand molded objects which show great ability and ingenuity. His portrait being finished, the adventurer turns to leave thinking how this display increased his artistic appreciation.

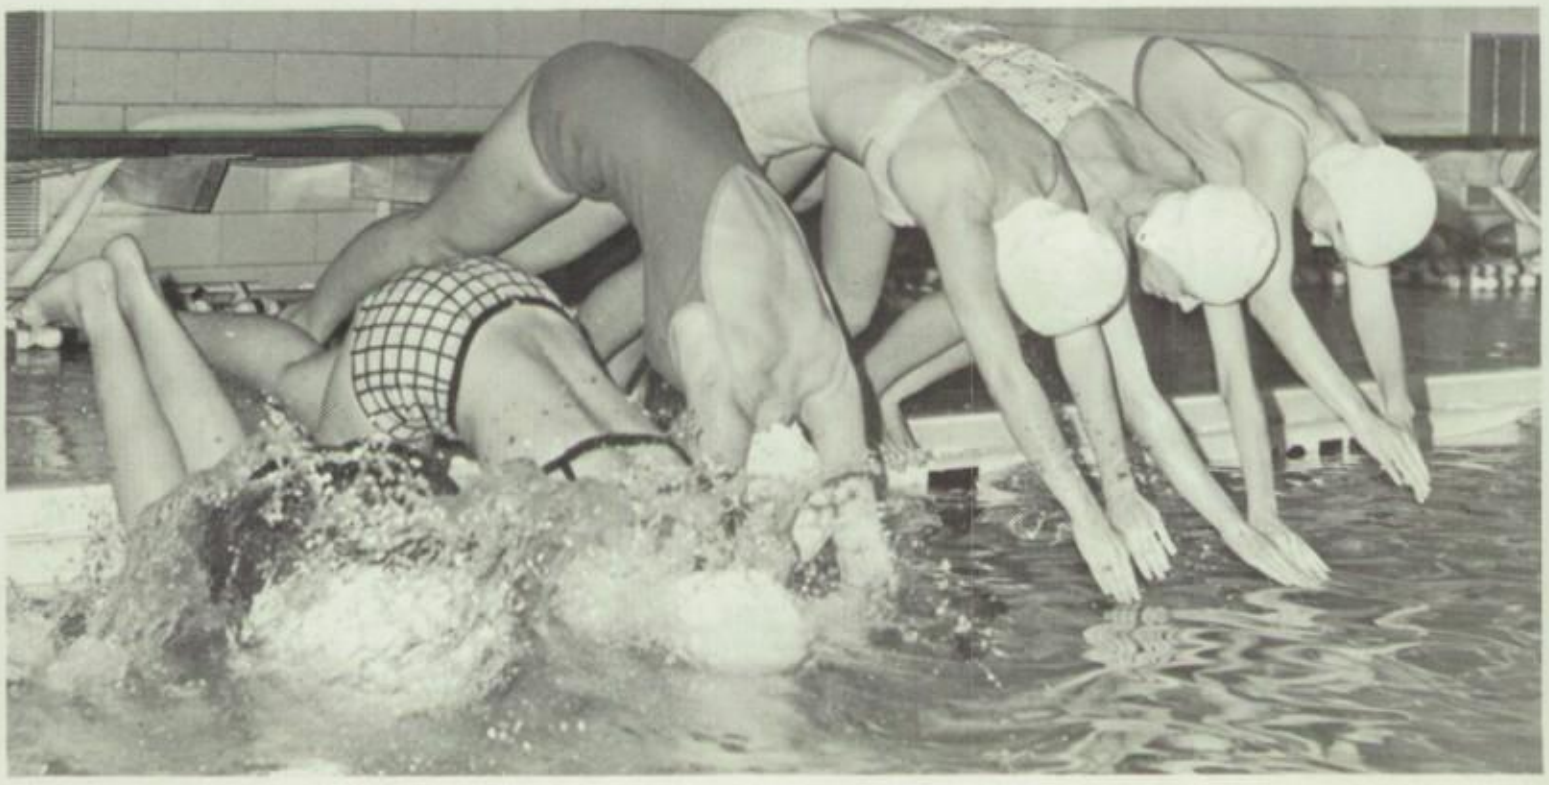
Moans and groans mingled with the call of "Squat thrusts-two-three-four" catch the adventurer's attention. While he stops for a moment to try to interpret these sounds, a ball rolls in front of him. As he reaches out to grab the passing ball, the vagabond barely escapes the rushof thirty boys in hot pursuit of it. Stumbling on a little further, the splashing of water draws him toward the swimming area. Looking into the pool, he is struck with horrow. Several people appear to be drowning! A teacher standing along the side of the pool calmly assures him that they are only inexperienced seventh-graders learning the flutter-kick. Turning, the explorer comes face to face with a large bony skeleton. When he has recovered from his shock, he learns that this is where students acquire the basics of human anatomy, and the fundamentals of healthy living.

Swimmers practice the basics of diving.



Simplicity and daring composed industrial design

During his wanderings, the Pathfinder passes a room with weird-looking desks and people bending over them sketching funny marks and lines. Unknown to him, the wanderer has stumbled upon a very important part of the Industrial Arts Department, mechanical drawing. Strange noises composed of clangs, bangs, and buzzes interrupt his sight-seeing. Tracing the source of these noises, he finds what reminds him of a small factory. The explorer has discovered the wood and metal shops. He watches silently as students cut, bend, and mold pieces of wood and metal into finished and useful products. The traveler marvels at these future industrialists at they learn their skills of tomorrow.

ENGLISH DEPARTMENT

What does the Pathfinder see? Those students are surely making funny faces! Of course, this is Mrs. LaRose's speech class doing their tongue excerises. From the sounds that surround him, he is convinced that he has found the English Department. The vagabond spends more time in this area becasue there are so many new and different subjects to investigate. He feels quite impressed and confident that recent alterations have considerably improved the English Department.

English Department added a variety of novel courses

Man and his world evolved through social studies

Proceeding down the winding trail, the Pathfinder stumbles upon maps and charts scattered before him. As he looks around, he discovers several groups of students, some engaged in heated discussions about current events, others diligently studying the happenings of the past. Continuing on, the wanderer is shocked by the sight of several students apparently taking a siesta. What on earth did these people do to make them so tired? Asking a bypasser, the traveler is informed that this is a psychology class studying the behavior of the human being. He also learns that many other courses are offered which help the student appreciate the world in which he lives.

John Novelesi

As the weary traveler trudges down the endless trail, he hears a strange sound drifting from an unexplored foot-path. He smiles as he discovers new typing students pecking the keys of much-used typewriters. On his left, he spots weird figures covering a blackboard and he concludes that anyone who can read short-hand is almost super-human. Continuing onward, he chuckles at the students in typing II who wonder if they will survive their work. As he ambles onward, the wanderer decides that a commercial course is not all glamour but a great deal of hard work.

Mysterious sciences entranced adventurous students

"Hey! My worm swallowed a piece of thread!"

"Stupid, that's the ventral nerve cord!"

Curiosity drives the Pathfinder in to find what has prompted this conversation. He see many little pans with dissected earth worms pinned to the surface, the students gleefully probing the worms' innards. He has entered the Biology I Lab where students learn the fundamentals of living things. Further down the hall, he is hit by a foul-smelling smoke screen. Weird creatures emerge with round plastic eyes and unusual costumes. Test tubes and beakers prove this to be the chemistry lab, and the weird creatures are only the students in goggles and aprons. Turning to leave, a spring shoots past the door. BOING!!! Physics students are learning the laws of waves. All these unusual scenes present the world of science to the traveler.

John Seaburn

Foreign languages spoke for themselves

"Comment-allez vous?" Startled by this unfamiliar-sounding expression, the Pathfinder approaches the person who uttered it, hestitating as to how he should address him. The friendly linquist explains in English, that he along with others are studying French, one of the three languages offered at Riverside. The other two, German and Spanish, also have appeal to many of the students. The Scholar leads the wanderer to the language labratory. Glancing aroung the lab, he sights students with metal earphones on their heads. Sounds which are mumble-jumble to the vagabond, are spoken into self-adjusted gray microphones. The linguist continues to explain that language students learn the basics of a foreigh tongue, thus helping them to better understand their own language as well as the language and culture of other societies.

The Pathfinder approaches a large field where he discovers the Riverside Baseball team. He is watching one of many strenuous practices that take place throughout the season. The traveler watches as the individual team members are shaped into a coordinate single unit. Encouraged by an occasional "Hustle, hustle . . . ," the players strain to reach the peek of their atheletic abilities. Out of the sweat of these practices, minds are sharpened and bodies are physically readied. The passerby marvels at the zeal and good sportsmanship achieved by participation in such a sport.

Dodging low-hanging branches, breaking through over-grown bushes, and stumbling over protruding rocks and logs, the Pathfinder's tour includes the Riverside Cross-Country path. Hearing the rumble of feet and heavy breathing and panting, his little friend advises him to clear the trail, for the cross-country team is approaching. As the men in green flash by, the Pathfinder is surprised to stragglers slowly lagging behind. Questioning this, he is told that they are the essence of the cross-country team. Their willingness to work and determination is what makes the team great. Viewing this scene, the travler knows what is meant by the saying, "When the going gets tough, the tough get going!"

Girls' Track Team

The site of several girls running around the track leaves the Pathfinder aghast. He is astonished by the abilities of these Riverside girls, who are becoming so active in competitive sports. His companion proudly informs him that the Girl's Track Team has placed first in the Beaver County Girls Track Championship meet for the last two years. The girls practice diligently at the high jump, and softball-throw as well as other track and field events.

"Why do attractive young girls go out for this sport?" asks the astounded Pathfinder—to achieve and maintain a healthy and shapely appearance, of course.

Golf Team

"Shh, we must be quiet for a few minutes."

Whack!

"Fore!"

"Good shot! This is our golf team. It is only a year old, but the boys who belong gain valuable experience along with doing something they enjoy."

The Pathfinder is not sure what is happening; but, as his newly found friend continues his explanation, the whole idea becomes clearer. He informs the traveler that the golf team has competed with other teams in surrounding areas. They have a short season in the fall, but enjoy it while it lasts. This new game looks like fun to the Pathfinder—maybe he will try it sometime.

Football

"Hut-2-3-4! Hut-2-3-4!" are the shouts heard by the Pathfinder and his little friend as they stand and watch the players going through the procedure of exercises involved in football training. Gasping for air, they run in place for a few minutes that seem like an eternity. Without a moment's rest, the coach commands another series of exercises. These are only the routine warm-up drills. After they are completed, a series of basic fundamentals are started—tackling, passing, running, and blocking—essentials for every successful game. The two spectators observe that hard work and endurance are needed for each play which must be carried out with persistence and durability. Watching the newly-formed football team makes the Pathfinder conscious of the toil and effort that goes into team work.

As the tour of Riverside's sports department continues, the Pathfinder's attention is attracted by some shapely young ladies in bathing suits. Upon asking his companion what they are, he learns that these girls are not bathing beauty contestants but are members of the Green Marlins, the girls' swimming team. Having invited himself into the pool area to watch their practice, the wayfarer is amazed at the enjoyment and vigor the girls inject into their exercises. Under the watchful, experienced eye of their coach, the girls strive to perfect various strokes and dives. The ability and appearance of the Green Marlins makes the girls' competitive swimming at Riverside a very enjoyable spectator sport.

The splashing of water and the gasps for air draw the Pathfinder and his guide to the swimming area. There they see what seems to be mass confusion as boys jump, dive, and leap into the pool. The guide explains that this is the Boy's Swim Team and describes the various strokes and dives they are practicing. He tells of the strenuous training the boys must endure in order to compete with other sectional teams. As the Pathfinder observes the practicing team, he marvels at the determination and energy they possess. Such qualities can only produce a great team.

Timidly, the Pathfinder enters the natatorium following his companion. Looking down from the bleachers to the pool, he sees swimmers spotlighted by a spectrum of multi-colored lights which give the effect of a kaleidoscope. Amazed by the colorful costumes and scenery, the Pathfinder inquires as to how much time is spent on the Annual Swim Show. He is surprised when his guide tells of the mandatory rehearsals held before and after school as well as during study halls and activity periods. The combined efforts of students and coaches turn the grueling work into three enjoyable and relaxing evening performances.

Bowling League

The Pathfinder becomes a little unnerved at the spectacle before him. Never has he witnessed an activity quite as noisy as this one. Boys and girls, yelling and laughing, are aiming large balls at ten small white hour-glass shaped statuettes at the end of a narrow "alley." His guide discloses that this is the sport of bowling. Every Saturday, interested students improve their bowling skills at a local bowling alley. League teams bowl against each other and the victors compete against teams from other areas for team and individual championships. The Saturday Bowling League provides experience, fun, and exercise for many students.

Entering the boys' locker room, the Pathfinder and his friend see coaches Melfi and George in the midst of the traditional pep-talk. Pointing to the listening athletes, the wanderer's guide proudly explains that both varsity teams work diligently for their victories. Bitterly, he tells about the critic-rated last place varsity team and the under-estimated competitive junior varsity squad. Yet, he triumphantly informs the Pathfinder that the varsity cagers prove themselves worthy of first division ranking and the jayvees show the public competitive sporting action. Though public support may not uphold the Panthers at the outset, the Pathfinder discovers the spirit of Riverside athletics is true dedication.

Junior High Basketball

Inside the gymnasium, the Pathfinder and his guide watch as young boys practice basic basketball skills. While they drill on shooting baskets, guarding defensively and dribbling balls, the friend of the traveller boasts that the junior high basketball team continues its superior record from previous years. Under the new supervision of Coach Melfi, the junior high squad shows that the foundations of Riverside basketball are improving and providing promising athletes for future varsity teams.

Panther Cheerleaders

Eagerly, the curious Pathfinder questions his well-informed instructor. After seeing all the teams—what they do and how they do it—what else can be left of sports at Riverside? Patiently leading the Pathfinder, his guide points the way where their moment of solitude suddenly evolves into an over-powering roar from an enthusiastic crowd. While some of the basketball players maneuver with the skill of a winning team, hundreds of people yell and scream their encouragement. In front of the crowd, uniformed girls clap and cheer, showing the fans what to shout. Pointing to the girls, the Pathfinder's friend tells him that these are the varsity and junior varsity cheerleaders. In order to promote school spirit, the guide explains how the cheerleaders make posters and organize school spirit campaigns besides the practice of cheering routines. After watching them in action, the Pathfinder agrees that the cheerleaders deserve credit for their loyalty to the team and to the student body.

Smiling, the Pathfinder's guide leads him back through the gymnasium and into the natatorium. In answer to the wanderer's question, he replies that the coaches stand behind the scenes in every sport. These instructors guide, prod, challenge, and correct the aspiring athletes until a team emerges that is a smoothly working unit, composed of individuals dependent upon each other. When situations arise that threaten to destroy school spirit, the coaches encourage the student morale with their faith in their teams and athletes. By sacrificing their time and energy, the coaches prove their interest in the sports and the students of Riverside.

Mixed Chorus

'Ah-Oh-Ee. Ah-Oh-Ee." The warm-up exercises echo through the vacant halls. The Pathfinder pauses to appreciate the soothing harmonies of the music that follows. He finds tranquility in the sounds he hears and follows them to the place of their origin. The various choir sections, including soprano, alto, tenor, and bass, are blending their voices to form one melodious sound. The director works diligently to make his choir follow the complex movements he executes. A roaring composition is heard next causing the room to vibrate with fury. How can a group of fifty-two students produce a sound so immense? The Pathfinder realizes that with the gift of a voice, the will to work hard and the guidance of a director are needed to perform with quality the types of songs that are in existence today.

Senior Band

As the Pathfinder moves from the main hallway, he is suddenly swept up by a wave of students hurrying toward the music wing of Riverside. The stream of scurrying students takes him to a large room filled with raised platforms and curiously shaped stands. Someone pushes an instrument into his hand and chases him up the risers. He has arrived at the daily eighth period band rehearsal. A friendly young musician informs him that through these daily practices and drills, the band has accomplished such honors as taking first place in the Kaufmann's Thanksgiving Day Parade and receiving an invitation to the Virginia Beach Music Festival in Virginia Beach. The Band Boosters, an organization composed of parents and band members, provides financial support by an annual fund-raising auction. All the money they earn is used to purchase letters and jackets for the band members. In addition to marching, the band presents a concert of thrilling and stirring music in the spring. The traveler discovers that this is an organization of which everyone can be proud because it has brought honor and distinction, not to itself but to all Riverside.

Junior Band

"ATTENTION! There will be a practice of the Junior Band sixth period today!" The Pathfinder, finishing this notice, realizes that the sixth period is about to begin. Walking outside into the warm sunshine, his attention is drawn to an assemblage of students with their instruments and music. The director gives his command for the members to line up in formation. Once in their respective places, the drum major gives the signal for the practice to begin. The Junior Band strikes up a lively tune and proceeds to rehearse their routine. These daily drills prepare each member for the competitiveness of the Senior Band.

Tents, demonstrations, exhibits
Beckoning a wandering Pathfinder
To discover new worlds.

ACTIVITIES

Senior High Student Council

A little miniature store can be seen not too far in the distance. The Pathfinder discovers that this Compact "five and ten" is called the Bookstore. Money from the items sold here is used by the Student Council to do things for the school which will be a benefit to it. A "food drive" and a "clothing drive" are sponsored each year to supply needy families with the necessities of life. The wanderer discovers an information booth not far from him. Here directions and assistance are offered, making the fair a more enjoyable experience. The Student Council Provides an opportunity for representation of all students in school problems and student government.

What is a fair without hot buttered popcorn? Anxiously, the Pathfinder awaits his turn in the crowd around the over active popcorn machine. When he is finally served, the wanderer asks a hurried worker what organization has sponsored this concession stand. Cheerfully she answers that the Junior High Student Council has organized this project along with many others for the benefit of all students and visitors. Being a council member, also gives the student a chance to become involved in the leadership of the school. As the warm kernels of popcorn melt in his mouth, the traveller decides that the student council has helped to make Riverside a school of enjoyment and pride.

Winding his way in and out of the active booths, the Pathfinder comes across a sign reading, "The Tri-Hi-Y Asks For Your Assistance In Helping Needy Children." The members of the junior high and senior high Tri-Hi-Y Clubs ask for contributions of money, food, or clothing for a worthwhile cause. Unfortunately, the wanderer has nothing to give; but, he is glad to see so many people around him generously contributing what they can. A warm feeling fills his heart as the Pathfinder walks past the diligent and enthusiastic girls and realizes that these young women are doing much to brighten the dark and dismal lives of others.

Bottom Row: Dawn Lipan, Thelma Lauraun, Sue Degennaro, Robin McClintock, Joyce Dillan, Lori Hill, Earla Felix, Patti Quinn, secretary, Kathy Marshall, vice-president, Cindy Green, president, Barbara Teets, treasurer, Cindy Vargo, Chaplain, Kristine Lonkert, Becky Main, Sany Hume, Judy Baros, Toni Jeannette, Elaine Waterfield, Carole Dove, Toni Jerome, Miss Krovisky, *sponsor. Fragments of a deep, heated conversation drift out of the tent near the Pathfinder. Upon hearing parts of this discussion, his curiosity is aroused and he cautiously enters. Members of the Junior Hi-Y and Senior Hi-Y sit around a table intensely involved in their discussion, "How Christian Living Affects the Everyday Activities of Teen-agers." In the background, other members play basketball, volleyball, and ping-pong, exemplifying the Christian attitude of the ensuing debate. The traveler learns from friendly members that the purpose of the organization is to promote sportsmanship, scholarship and good Christian character in the school and community. As the members bring their discussion to a close, the Pathfinder leaves feeling a little amazed at the power of youth and its awareness of moral responsibility.

Health Careers Club

Many future nurses, doctors, medical secretaries, and technicians assemble around a door having a sign reading, "Health Careers Club" hanging above it. Upon investigation, the Pathfinder learns that this organization has many members who do worthwhile projects throughout the year, such as, sending Christmas cards to men overseas and selling Christmas cookies to make money. They also work as volunteers at United Hospital and tour hospitals in the vicinity to gain helpful information for the future. With the help of their sponsor, the members of the organization gain a lot of valuable experience which will aid them in their future careers.

Pulling back the flaps of a large canvas display tent, the Pathfinder, discovers a hundred girls running in circles as if being pursued by some evil being. Staring at the laughing panting girls, he sees a ball fly though the crowd and hit an unsuspecting youngster. Alarmed at these incongruous events, another observer explains to the Pathfinder that this is the Girls' Athletic Association exhibit with both junior high and senior high clubs playing a game of dodgeball. With the aid of their sponsors, both clubs organize competitions in many sports. Although the two clubs independently meet and compete, they share the goals of encouraging individual talent and team sportsmanship.

Science Society

"Ten cents a gaze!" is the cry that penetrates the air near the science booth. Above the telescope a sign reads, "See the Milky Way at its best." As the Pathfinder squints through the telescope, he is disturbed by the sound of shuffling feet and moaning bodies. As a group of worn-out Science Society members shuffle to their seats, the Pathfinder inquires about the odd scene. He learns that these vigorous young people are no longer vigorous because they have just returned from the annual "Death March." After resting a few minutes, the hikers are up again examining rocks and studying the stars. Moving towards the end of the exhibition, the traveler is attracted by a strange apparatus and a loud beeping noise. In the curious machine, tiny dots are racing across the face of a screen. The sign beside it identifies the machine as being an electron counter. Our Pathfinder leaves the exhibit somewhat baffled, but intriqued and expressed by the seemingly unknown realm of science.

Future Homemakers of America

"Get your ice-cold lemonade! Made by the Future Homemakers of America!" cries the energetic vendor. Persuaded by a young girl's efforts and his own dry throat, the Pathfinder pulls his last dime from his tattered pocket and places it on the counter. As he stands and drinks the sweet tartness, the wanderer talks to many of the F.H.A. members and learns of their projects. One informative girl tells him about the many dinners which the members serve and the two annual teas in honor of the teachers at Riverside that are sponsored by the Future Homemakers. Another member explains that the club makes money for its projects by selling Christmas wrapping paper. Reluctantly, the Pathfinder leaves hoping to meet more people at the fair as genial as the girls he left behind him.

Knights of Riverside

"Checkmate!" The shout emerges from a nearby tent. Walking over to investigate, the Pathfinder finds a large but silent crowd around a life-size chess board. Members of the Chess Club take their respective positions on the board ready to begin a new match. Each member is dressed in the apparel representing his playing figure. Some are in costumes of a king, knight, or a pawn. A pawn advances a square at the command of the speaker. His opponent then responds to this move beginning the newest match. The Pathfinder, along with the other spectators, quietly awaits the results of the match, respecting the concentration and skill that must be exerted to execute this ultimate of chess games of the Knights of Riverside.

Future Teachers of America

A line of boys and girls file across the fairground and pass the Pathfinder. He curiously follows into a tent. Inside he finds a class room with rows of seats and a blackboard. Taking a seat in the back, he listens attentively. The teacher introduces a member of Future Teachers who will take the place of the teacher for a little while. By being "teacher," she will acquire valuable experience needed to be a qualified teacher. As the "teacher" timidly walks to the front of the room, she begins to read to the class, shakily at first, but gaining confidence as she continues. When the story ends, the Pathfinder leaves knowing that success is gained through experience.

Library Club

Groping through the darkness, the Pathfinder finds a seat in the audience as the movie begins. The Pathfinder is skeptical of the subject; the duties of the Library Club would seem to be quite limited. Attentively, he sits through the introduction and is amazed at the number of books which are ordered, received and processed in one year. Two girls are shown lettering book spines while others paste pockets and place the books on shelves. Another group works in the magazine room finding and replacing the periodicals used for research and recreation by the students and teachers. All the members of the Library Club check the shelves to keep books in order and check out books. Field trips to museums and large public libraries are not uncommon to club members. As a community project, Library Club members spend free time to help establish a reading library in an apartment building for senior citizens. The lights inside the movie-tent flash on as the movie ends and the Pathfinder leaves appreciating the time and work devoted to maintaining a library.

Electric Club

A tiny robot jerks into action as a light blinks on inside the demonstration area. Fascinated by its realistic action, the Pathfinder intently watches the miniature machine as it appears to repair a small amplifier. Moving around the repair area, the robot repairs and operates over-head projectors, tape-recorders, record players, film strip projectors, and movie projectors. Then, the tiny man walks to the center of the cluster of machines and bows to the audience as the light in the booth clicks off. Meanwhile, backstage, the members of the Electric Club congratulate one another with beaming faces and the feeling of accomplishment, for their tiny robot has shown the responsibilities and activities of the Electric Club and its members.

Beside one elaborately decorated tent, the Pathfinder comes across a brightly-lit marquee. It is advertising a popular musical presented by the National Thespians of Riverside. The scenes appear so intriguing, that he cannot resist the performance. Inside, the audience enthusiastically applauds the professionalism of the production. Young actors and actresses scurry behind the curtain preparing scenery, costumes, and make-up. At intermission, the Junior "R" Thespians present entertaining humorous skits. These young people are gaining the skills which will allow them, someday, to perform in the major productions. As the musical ends, the wayfarer stands with the rest of the audience, giving the cast a hearty "Bravo" for an excellent performance.

Portraits, landscapes, abstracts and figurines adorn the walls and tables of the display. His curiosity being aroused, the Pathfinder enters the building beneath a poster proclaiming, "Art Exhibit." Framed oil paintings and watercolor paintings portray the peaceful atmosphere of nature as found at McConnel's Mill, a familiar locale for Art Club field trips. Portraits in a variety of medias attract his attention because of their fine artistic quality. On a table amid numerous clay and wire sculptures, a pamphlet explains the high standards for Art Club membership. Various pages show how all the artistic products reflect influences from field trips of artistic interest, from movies about famous artists and their techniques, and from modern concepts of art.

National Forensic League

Hearing the sounds of a heated argument coming from a booth entitled National Forensic League, the Pathfinder pauses for a while at this booth, and notices that the students are divided into two panels. While one side expounds upon their argument, the other side listens intently to what is being said and then retaliates with points opposing and cutting to the other side. This occurs over and over again until one side is victorious. Although competition is difficult and mind-bending, the students benefit from it greatly in present and future times by developing the fine points of debating and in communicating with his fellow man. As the vagabond passes this exhibition, he thinks of how lucky those students are to have the opportunity to develop this important skill of speaking.

Business Club

The sign, "Business Club" draws the Pathfinder's attention because he has always had a secret desire to try out a typewriter. He stands at the end of the line, waiting his turn to pass through the tent. As he draws nearer the tent, he hears the noise of typewriters going full speed. He sees girls typing dittoes, stencils, and writing out bills for the work that is complete. The traveler sits down at an electric typewriter and begins to strike the keys. Being totally unfamiliar with it, he pushes the period to hard and ends up with an entire row of them. He moves on and finds girls typing tests for teachers, programs for outside organizations, and even cheers for pep rallies. He sees many kinds of duplication machines along with dictaphone and clerical machines. He leaves the tent with all curiosity for typewriters satisfied and the feeling that in the future, these well-trained girls will make good secretaries.

Junior Historians

"Come to the History Fair!" A cry rings out from a nearby tent. Approaching the canvas tent, the Pathfinder finds a mass of people viewing numerous historic exhibits created by the social studies students. As he looks at one of the eye-catching displays, he is handed a colorful pamphlet. Opening the brochure, he discovers that it explains the functions and purposes of the Junior Historians Organization, the club that is sponsoring the History Fair. It tells of the field trips taken by the members to areas of historic interest and about the Christmas cards sent to men in Vietnam. The traveler puts the pamphlet in his coat pocket and continues looking at the historic displays. As he leaves the tent, he appreciates the historic interest of the students of this organization.

High Tide

"Get your paper! News as it happens! Only 10 cents a copy! Get your news right now!"

The Pathfinder finds a job to earn expense money to see the rest of the fair. How lucky he is to have stumbled into the "High Tide" tent. It seems this newspaper is in such demand that the staff cannot supply enough copies for their readers. The vagabond is astonished at the hustle and bustle around "Delilah," the offset printing press. The students on the staff not only write their articles and do layout, but they also print their paper! The Pathfinder reads stirring editorials, amusing anecdoted, and informative articles about the life and activities at Riverside. No wonder the "High Tide" is in such great demand. The Pathfinder feels proud to be working for such an informed, efficient literary organization.

The Pathfinder spots a large sign on a tent reading "Welcome physically fit, all sports represented." This sign has given him a sudden feeling of inadquateness. Intrigued by the presence of this sign he feels that he must explore further. Tripping over ropes and pegs, the traveler arrives at the rear of the tent. Bending over, he lifts the flap and peers inside. To his surprise, he does not see large muscular shapes but boys and girls of all shapes and sizes. To one side of the tent he finds a group of people pressing apples into cider. This group is preparing for a major project of the club. They are making cider for the annual "Hoe Down." Many hours are spent by members and sponsors alike in preparing for this event. All money earned by this project and others is used for the purchase of letters and jackets for the different sports organizations at Riverside. The traveler sees that the Varsity "R" is not only a representation of the different sports at Riverside but is an excellent example of the hard work and spirit demonstrated by all Riverside athletes.

Christmas Court: Jennifer Main, Kristine Anderson, Colleen McKinney, princess, Linda Teets, Phyllis Pesce.

Varsity "R" Christmas Dance

The doorway opens into a brightly-lit Swiss village. All around, young couples are dancing or talking and laughing. Colorfully costumed girls serve refreshments to everyone. Suddenly, the festivities are interrupted by the arrival of Santa Claus who is bringing gifts for everyone. The loveliest of the young girls is honored by her friends as the "Princess" of the dance. She reigns over one of the biggest social events of the year at Riverside—the Varsity "R" Christmas Dance.

Santa joins the festivities at the "Alpine Village."

English Club

"Help! Help!" At the young girl's cry of distress, the Pathfinder hastens to the rescue. Retreaving the blowing papers, he gallantly hands them back to the young girl. Indebted to his service, she explains the significance of the returned booklets. These are the Troubadours. Each student of Riverside has the opportunity to submit literary articles to the English Club for consideration for publication in the Troubadour. Articles representing the best literary talents of Riverside are selected by the editor and sponsors for the magazine. Having learned the value of this publication, the Pathfinder feels gratified that he has been able to save these windblown Troubadours.

"In a Spanish Garden"

Prom Court-1968: Jennifer Main, Bronya, Bisceglia, Deborah Giancola, Cindy Brown, Patsy Vedar, Linda Teets, Colleen McKinney.

Dust from the midway chokes the Pathfinder as he roams through the exhibits. Seeking a place of refuge, he spies a walled enclosure and ducks through the gate into a dimly lit garden . . . Stars twinkling through a midnight blue sky set a romantic mood as couples sway to music drifting through the air . . . Beautiful girls in their long, lovely gowns and men in their formal attire speak to each other with their eyes as they drift as one "In a Spanish Garden." Under the canopy of the garden wall, other couples sip punch while sitting around small tables. From these people, he learns that this is the junior-senior prom. For months the juniors work to provide this evening of beauty for the graduating seniors . . . Many long hours of work have produced this garden of enchantment with its fountains. Looking one last time, the Pathfinder sighs and takes up his journey again.

Her Majesty, The Queen, Cindy Brown.

Pathfinder 1969

The Pathfinder registers joy and intense curiosity at the sign, "The Pathfinder." Has he finally found his tent, the place where he really belongs? Entering, he is confronted by the site of approximately twenty people engaged in the activity of preparing a literary publication – writing, cropping, photography, and typing. But, what did all this have to do with him? He cautiously approaches the cluttered tables and is immediately drawn into the work by the excited, active staff members. He happily discovers they are doing exactly what he has been doing – discovering and exploring the many wonderous and exciting trails of this astonishing place called Riverside High School. The high idealism and efficiency which the staff projects into this work hypnotizes the Pathfinder. Had he begun his search here, many of the hardships of his journeys could have been avoided. The Pathfinder has successfully captured the fantasy and realism of a year in the lives of Riverside students – 1969.

The 1969 Pathfinder Staff would especially like to thank State Trooper Paul Bivens, Mr. Clayton Pflug, Mr. Norman Freshcorn, and everyone for their gracious assistance and cooperation.

Pausing at the crest of a hill, our journey with the Pathfinder comes to an end. Our adventures together have mingled into a period of time never to be recaptured, but never to be forgotten. We cannot stay by the river forever—new paths lead us from the places we have known. So we must go to wander trails that cannot always be discovered together, but will not be traveled alone. All the memories of these places, these people and these times will go with us.

Riverside 1969.
